

BATTLE'S

OVER

A NATION'S TRIBUTE

11TH NOVEMBER 2018

100 YEARS OF REMEMBRANCE

Introducing the Official Publication of Record and Legacy

Battle's Over: A Nation's Tribute - 11th November 2018, is the official Battle's Over commemorative publication of record and legacy marking the 100th Anniversary of the Armistice which ended the First World War– and the conclusion of the last four years of official Centenary Remembrance and Commemoration.

Chronicling unprecedented human carnage on the battle fields of Europe and beyond, the publication will also focus on the home front, where, amidst tragic loss and suffering, communities united with industry – from munitions to agriculture – to achieve victory and preserve the nation's freedom.

The editor is Alan Spence, military specialist and publisher who served for eight years as a director of the Atlantic Council in Washington DC and is a Trustee of the Royal Air Force Museum and Director Emeritus of the Royal Air Force Museum American Foundation.

In addition to featuring official messages of gratitude and homage from government, civic and military leaders, the publication is also inviting tributes from industry, finance, commerce, media and sport, as well as civil society, faith and community leaders – in essence giving voice to the nation at large to express messages of commemoration and gratitude in this unique source of reference and remembrance for future generations.

EDITORIAL

The editorial will comprise a series of in-depth features produced by expert writers on all aspects of the First World War. These will include official military historians, leading academics, specialist authors and journalists.

SECTION ONE

THE BATTLE FRONT

The long road to Compiegne

- Battle's Over: A Nation's Tribute acts of remembrance and commemoration within the detailed context of the events of the same day one hundred years ago –the signing of the Armistice at Compiegne in northern France.
- A four-year timeline of the major military events of the First World War on land, at sea and in the air - from the initial cavalry skirmishes resembling warfare a century before to new technological breakthroughs.
- What life was like during the First World War for soldiers, sailors and airmen in battle and, merchant seamen running the German U boat blockade.

- Less well-known events, such as the use of British and German miners to tunnel beneath each other's front lines.
- The human cost of four years of war to all the combatant nations.
- What the First World War changed militarily, the birth of airpower – indeed the Royal Air Force itself in April 1918 - and much more.
- The vital role played by merchant seamen in averting starvation in Britain.
- The vital role of Commonwealth troops– where they came from and how long it took for their sacrifice to be officially recognised.
- The unknown story of the many thousands of Chinese workers who laboured on behalf of Britain, France, the United States and Russia, digging trenches, cleaning equipment, loading ships....and the injustices they and their country faced.

SECTION TWO: Part One

THE HOME FRONT

Community resolve and resilience

- How Britain mobilised on the home front to support the entire war effort as the First World War became “Everyone’s War”.
- How a foreign battle front came to the home front for the first time in Britain’s history.
- The many changes in everyday life as communities coped with pain and loss and cared for the wounded, amidst increasing food shortages and rationing.
- The social changes which the First World War engendered, particularly the mobilisation of women on the home front in industry and transport and how this helped accelerate women's suffrage.

- How despite all, people played sport and sang on the home front and the battle front, musicians still composed, authors and poets wrote.

SECTION TWO: Part Two

THE HOME FRONT

Community and industry unite

- A deep insight in to how communities throughout the country united with all types of industry from munitions to food, transport to textiles, mines and power stations to generate the economic power to help drive the armed forces to victory.
- A detailed picture of life in the fields, the factories, the ports... schools, hospitals.
- In greater detail the risks in the munitions factories, the tragic accidents, the conditions of work.
- In depth look at how the country's railway networks and ports_ were placed and maintained on a strict war footing.
- How government, industry and trades unions united together to maximise the availability and efficiency of labour.

SECTION THREE:

Community Remembrance and Commemoration

- The birth of a new age of national and community remembrance in scope, size and architectural iconography unlike anything which had gone before.

- How remembrance and commemoration further changed over the following decades, becoming more inclusive of all groups by age, gender, ethnicity and origin.

FINAL REFLECTION

Alan Spence +
